A Letter to You from Mr. MacLean

Provincial Normal School,
Vancouver, B. C.

Dear Pupil:

You are now entering upon your fourth year at school. You will learn many new things during the next two years. You will not learn many new things in Writing, but you should learn to write much better and more rapidly.

A few new letter forms are shown in this Compendium. You may use these forms in your writing if you prefer them to the ones you learned in the lower grades. Learn to make one form well.

Use a free, gliding movement in all your written work and you will become a good penman. Always sit in a correct, healthful position.

This book must last you for two years. Take good care of it.

I wish you success.

Yours sincerely,

H. B. MacLean

P.S. Before writing in this Compendium please study the instructions on Page 1. There is an index to this Book on Page 48.

How To Use This Practice Compendium

This Compendium is to be used for two years.

Grade IV. pupils will write in lines marked Grade IV., only.

Grade V. pupils will write in lines marked Grade V.

- (1) One, or two, lines in this Compendium is enough for ONE complete lesson.
- (2) Study the form of the drills, letters, words, and sentences.
- (3) Practise these on extra sheets of paper about five inches wide and eight inches long. One of these sheets is enough for a lesson.
- (4) Place this extra sheet on your open Compendium while you practise.
- (5) Compare what you have written with the forms in this Compendium.
- (6) After you have had this practice, write the lesson as well as you can in this Book. While in Grade IV., write in spaces marked Grade IV.; in Grade V. use the spaces marked Grade V. See how much improvement you can make in the year.
- (7) Try to write each line a little better than the one before, and each page better than the preceding one.
- (8) Keep this Compendium neat and clean.
- (9) Do not be satisfied until you can write as well as the Grade Standards shown on pages 44 and 45.
- (10) Always sit in good position, hold your pen correctly, and write with freedom. Study the pictures on pages 3 and 4.
- (11) Study and practise quite often the forms of letters and figures shown on page 5.
- (12) Always write on the baseline.

The pupil should always write on the baseline as follows.

A man can run a race.

A PRACTICE LESSON

This page shows you how to arrange a practice lesson on a capital letter before writing in this Compendium.

1. Write about one line of each drill. Count quietly as you write. Hold your pen lightly and write freely.
2. Study the form of the letter in this Compendium. Then place your practice paper over it and write one line of letters.
3. Compare your letters with those in this book and see where you can improve.
4. Now write several more, always trying to do better.
5. Next study the word, and practise it as you did the letter. Compare with the writing in the Compendium. Study the curves and the spacing between the letters in the words.
6. Then study and practise the sentence.
7. Lastly, write your very best in the spaces in this Compendium. Note the spaces for Grades IV. and V. respectively.

ALWAYS WRITE ON THE BASELINE.

A Letter from the Author

Dear Pupil:

You have spent two more years practising penmanship. Your writing should be very good now.

Do you always write with freedom? Do you hold your penholder lightly and allow the hand to glide on the finger nails? Have you learned to sit erect in a healthful, comfortable position while you write?

Give samples of your writing to your teacher, who will send them to the Author. If your writing is up to the required standard you may qualify for a MacLean Method Junior Certificate.

Help your class win a High Honour Diploma. Your teacher will explain how to do this.

I wish you every success in your writing.

Yours sincerely,

H. B. MacLean
